

The University of Maine School of Forest Resources

Presents

The Spring 2009 Friday Seminar Series

January 30th:

“Umaine’s Sustainability Solutions Initiative.”

By Dr. Robert Lilieholm, E.L. Giddings Associate Professor of Forest Policy, University of Maine School of Forest Resources

February 6th:

“Murders, Rapes and Kidnappings: the Seamy Side of Wood Forensics.”

By Dr. Richard Jagels, Professor of Forest Biology, University of Maine School of Forest Resources

February 13th:

“Developing alternative models for regenerative forestry and cooperative low-impact woodland management with draft animal power.”

By Andrew Marshall, Education Director and Sam Brown, Forester, from the Maine Organic Farmers and Gardeners Association’s Low-Impact Forestry Initiative

February 20th:

“Restoring Habitat for Resilience and Vision in the Forested Landscape.”

By Andrea Read, Executive Director of the Newforest Institute

March 27th:

“Modeling the Sustainability of a Wood-Based Bio-refinery and its Supply Chains.”

By Dr. Anthony Halog, Assistant Professor of Industrial Ecology, LCA and Systems Sustainability, University of Maine School of Forest Resources

April 3rd:

“Is Forest Biology Facing Extinction?”

By Dr. Michael Greenwood, Ruth Hutchins Professor of Tree Physiology

April 10th:

“The Forest Ecosystem Research and Demonstration Area.”

By Dr. Mark Twery, Project Leader and Supervisory Research Forester, Northern Science, Technology, and Applied Results Program, U.S. Forest Service

April 17th:

“Deer, ferns, and seedlings: avoiding an alternate stable state”

By Dr. Matthew Kelty, Associate Professor, University of Massachusetts at Amherst College of Natural Resources and the Environment

April 24th:

“Past and future directions of research on the experimental forests.”

By Dr. John Brissette, Project Leader and Dr. Laura Kenefic, Research Forester, U.S. Forest Service Northeastern Research Station

Held at Noon each Friday in Nutting Hall Room 204